THE BOTANY TRAMWAY ACCIDENT.

On the night of 1st August the above accident occurred, and caused the death of the late JAMES A'HEARN. He leaves a wife and five little children unprovided for. From personal knowledge extending over a period of some years, we can testify he was a man of exemplary character in his sphere in life, and the Committee request the kind and generous sympathy of the public for this deserving case.

Subscription lists are lying at the undermentioned places:—

THE SEASON OF 1882.

In again addressing the Woolgrowers of the colonies, we would

We again confidently predict an active demand during the coming season, not alone from local buyers, but from buyers from England, America, and the Continent of Europe; for buyers in Germany, France, and Belgium are now represented here, and the demand will be strengthened by the fact that, owing to the prolonged dry weather which has prevailed in most parts of the interior, there will be a considerable falling-off in the quantity of Wool to come forward.

We again offer our services for the disposal of Wool in the

SYDNEY MARKET.

And growers may rely on our bestowing the most diligent attention and careful valuing on all Wool consigned to us for sale.

Our Warehouses at the Circular Quay are large and commodious, particularly well lighted, and in all respects admirably adapted for the display of Wool to the best advantage.

In order to encourage growers to sell in this market, we also Warehouse Accommodation at the low rate of

 on all Wool offered by us, which may not be sold.
 When owners' reserve prices cannot be obtained, we will ship to London to our Agents there, either making liberal and advanced or we will hand over shipping documents to the owners of the Wool, as may be desired.

our own south border. It brought in a gross revenue of £367,426 for only £138,809 of working expenses, leaving a return of 8·47 per cent. on the total cost. It was constructed cheaply, through a generally easy country, and has become now the thoroughfare between the two leading Australian ports. The next best railway from Melbourne to Adelaide is the Northern, from Melbourne to Echuca, and that also owes some of its success to the traffic from New South Wales. Taking all the five systems collectively, they have a return of 4·91 per cent. on their capital cost, against £330 for New South Wales during the previous year.

The interest on the Victorian railways in 1906-7, but as part of it was paid by the Government, was £1,036,751, but the actual loss on the year's transactions is put at £84,181. The Victorian railway loans were floated dear, averaging still 5·5 per cent. interest; but that will soon be greatly reduced by new loans to replace the old on better terms. There has also been expended £2,588,180, chiefly appropriated for the purchase of land, since £2,588,180, chiefly appropriated for the purchase of land, since £2,588,180, chiefly appropriated for the purchase of land, since estimated at current rates, is a fair profit and loss account. Putting together these various threads of a general argument, it must be confessed that for 1881 the prospects of Victorian railways are hopeful, and whatever may be the effect of our own extensions to Hay and onwards to our western borders, there does not seem to be any reason for Victorian despairing of their great national means of communication, even if they should have to depend more than the rest of the world on their own local produce. As population increases on the border lands, communication will increase also, and the stationing of men for coaches will tend greatly to augment rather than diminish the intercolonial traffic. Wool to the sea, and stores for the stations in return, are the dominating articles at present, but that will not be always so, and, after a few years, traffic will fall

The plain inference from this table is that nearly half the wool carried on Victorian railways is the produce of New South Wales, but that nearly half again is carried for the bulk of both her coarser and finer wools.

From Editha and the Dumitrag railway stations, and from Wodonga and its neighbour, Wagga, on the Murray, she had a revenue of only ETERNITY last year against £2,500,000. The other railway stations, however, are not so busy, therefore, that the wool traffic of the colony with all the return supplies, are much less worth fighting for by a differential tariff than Victorian politicians and administrators have been accustomed to imagine. If the whole 14,000 tons of wool sent Melbournewards from the banks of the Murray last year were the produce of New South Wales, they would not bring in a gross return of more than £100,000, at the freight Victoria is now charging. Yet the price realized for the wool in the London market was probably over £3,000,000, and the growers were very fortunate in getting such bulky and remunerative produce transmitted from their grazing grounds to the sea at such a small percentage on its value. A war of railway tariffs between the colonies would be a very silly thing, and it would not suit the public of either colony, and the facts adduced above amply evidence that, by such a war, Victoria has very little to gain, and much to lose.

(From the Argus.)

CARRIAGE OF WOOL ON THE VICTORIAN RAILWAYS.

The rates for the carriage of wool on the Victorian railways have been recently revised, and in a number of cases considerable reductions have been made. The revised list will come into operation on and after the 1st September. The following is a list of the revised rates. But it may be only applicable to bales and weighing under 20 bales and under 1s.; 25 miles and under, 1s. 3d.; 45 miles and under, 2s.; over 45 and up to 69 miles, 4d.; over 69 and up to 93 miles, 5d.; over 93 and up to 117 miles, 6d. For every five miles or part of five miles a cumulative rate is charged per bale, calculated on the preceding rate. These mileage rates do not apply to the wool consigned from country stations direct to the Williamstown or Sandridge piers. Upon such consignments 6d. per bale in addition to the rates for the carriage of wool on the following is a list of the rates from the principal railway stations to Melbourne:

THE DARLING RIVER

Darling and Riverina trade—and it has now—the trade with Victoria has been five millions sterling annually, and the Darling and Riverina trade is now close on seven millions.

If the Sydney people and the country people are really anxious to assist in the taking down of their wishes, they should lose no opportunity of assisting in the project of starting the continuance of the great Darling and Riverina trade, by making that line to Wentworth would only train to increase her trade to our further benefit, and contend that it is only by such a line that the Darling and Riverina trade from passing wholly into the hands of the English.

Any other line would not effect this. It is a plain and simple project, and one that is well calculated to benefit the Darling and Riverina, would, with the Hay line to all the Darling and Riverina world, equal the entire produce of our colony.

It is a project that has been for many years increasing trade of these districts should be done, and it only requires an outlay of £100,000 to be carried out.

It is a project that, with a knowledge of the Darling and Riverina trade, and Verber with having on Tuesday treated certain cows by starving them; headed guilty. Mr. Webster, Inspector-General of Police, said that he had been told by the defendant, Prie, proceeding in the defense, that three cows had died, and that the animals were in a most wretched state; there was no feed nor signs of life. The witness took some milk from the milk was in a bottle and so poor that it had not cost him anything to feed them. The witness stated that he visited the defendant when he saw the animals referred to in the worst case of starvation cows in such a state that they were off them; witness had been informed in the habit of supplying milk in the neighborhood; the witness said that he had been told by his friend, if his Worship had the power for the cows to be destroyed, visited the defendant's place daily.

Wether with having on Tuesday treated certain cows by starving and feeding greedily. Mr. Webster a member of the Board of Health, Inspector-General of Police, he, Pirie proceeded in the defendant's defense. The defense stated the animals were in a most wretched state there was no feed nor signs one of the cows had calved. The milk was in a bottle so poor that it had not coston Words, assistant to Mr. P. Webster, to take the milk when he saw the animals refused the worst case of starvation cows were in such bad condition that they were taken to the house in the habit of supplying milk in the neighborhood, thus an exceedingly injurious character to the Whelp had power to be destroyed. The defendant visited the defendant's place had been there that (Monday) morning and saw the cows at about 10 o'clock. Buchanan was summoned the defendant for cruelty bad case, and he would order the 45 and 10-100 cents, in default of which the defendant was immediately destroyed.
